Chelsea Dal Corso is a commercial litigator with experience in a wide-range of complex business disputes, representing a diverse array of companies and high-net-worth individuals in the hospitality, food and beverage, and entertainment industries, among others. She routinely defends food and beverage makers in consumer class actions involving California's Consumer Legal Remedies Act, False Advertising Law, and Unfair Competition Law.

She also represents studios, production companies, and individuals in commercial disputes, including complex breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty actions. Chelsea also is an instrumental part of a team handling highly sensitive and high-stakes nationwide civil human trafficking litigation for an international hospitality company. She develops successful settlement strategies after intensive fact investigations and counsels clients on anti-human trafficking initiatives to mitigate the risk of future litigation.

Chelsea is passionate about civil rights and criminal justice and maintains an active pro bono practice in these areas. Prior to private practice, Chelsea clerked for United States Bankruptcy Judge Marvin Isgur in the Southern District of Texas. She is admitted to practice in California and Texas.
