

eDiscovery and Information Management

Managing information and knowledge in a cost effective and defensible manner is an ever-increasing challenge for businesses today. DLA Piper's eDiscovery and Information Management practice provides innovative and efficient solutions to information management challenges, both within and outside of the litigation context. Our team consists of attorneys, litigation support professionals, and certified information governance professionals who are experienced in all facets of knowledge management, including how to strategically deploy process and technology to reduce risk and cost.

SERVICIOS RELACIONADOS

- Litigation, Arbitration and Investigations

Our team practices in all areas of information management, including:

- eDiscovery
- Records and information management
- Foreign data privacy
- Litigation readiness

Among Our Clients

The eDiscovery and Information Management practice serves businesses in a variety of industries and sectors. Our clients include Fortune 100 and Fortune 500 companies, along with emerging startup businesses and public utilities. We represent clients, both nationally and internationally, in the following sectors:

- Life sciences
- Technology
- Energy
- Banking and finance
- Healthcare
- Insurance

CAPABILITES

Managing the eDiscovery Process

DLA Piper's eDiscovery and Information Management group is experienced in all facets of the eDiscovery process, including:

- identification
- preservation
- collection
- review and analysis
- production

Our services include development of litigation hold notices and protocols; finding solutions to mitigate costs related to identification, collection and storage of data; and counseling on strategies for reducing the overall dataset to review for ultimate production. We also identify vendor tools that work most efficiently with specific client systems.

For the review process, we employ culling strategies and advanced technology, including technology assisted review, to isolate relevant data. We also have the ability to store data internally on secure servers, which decreases the cost of the eDiscovery process for our clients. Another means by which we ensure consistency and limit costs is our use of contract lawyers specifically trained to review and code electronically stored information (ESI).

Records and Information Management

DLA Piper's eDiscovery and Information Management group includes dedicated Records and Information Management (RIM) practitioners. The RIM team has as its foundation a network of lawyers experienced with records retention requirements around the world across a range of industries. The RIM team has established a methodology for the development of records and information management programs to include RIM policies and procedures, records retention schedules, training, implementation and audit. The data, research and templates developed to support this methodology serve as the foundation of our assessment of legal compliance globally.

We regularly advise clients with respect to the development of a consistent RIM strategy, based upon legal requirements and best practices, which are customized to the client's core business operations. We endeavor to help our clients proactively implement a defensible business strategy and avoid the risks and costs associated with the overall lack of an appropriate RIM program, or the failure of its enforcement.

Foreign Data Privacy

The eDiscovery and Information Management group addresses foreign data privacy issues on a regular basis and often coordinates with our Privacy practice on these issues. Our practitioners regularly oversee the transfer of data pursuant to data privacy regulations. This is often done in conjunction with DLA Piper colleagues in international offices. We also work with our clients to implement policies and procedures for the processing, collection and transfer of data subject to foreign data privacy laws.

Litigation Readiness

Our practitioners consult clients outside of the litigation context and provide consultation and training on a variety of litigation readiness topics, including litigation hold processes and procedures. We work with clients to put them in the most defensible position before litigation or investigation is a reality. This includes counseling clients on best practices, drafting or revising policies and procedures, and training on all aspects of eDiscovery and information management. We assist in developing policies and procedures that incorporate best practices in the field while simultaneously yielding cost savings.

Litigation Support Team

In addition to our team of attorneys, the eDiscovery and Information Management practice is supported by a team of litigation support professionals across the US. These members of the team are highly experienced in all aspects of eDiscovery and regularly support our case teams with data collection consulting, vendor selection, ESI processing and production. Having this in-house team allows us to provide our clients with consultation and technical work, and to do so in the most cost-efficient manner.

EXPERIENCE

Our recent representative experience includes:

- Developed a coordinated document management program and an eDiscovery protocol for an international health insurance company
- Revised litigation hold policy and procedures and trained in-house attorneys and stakeholders on litigation hold obligations for a major California-based public utility
- Served as national coordinating counsel managing the international and domestic preservation, collection, and processing of electronic and paper documents for a pharmaceutical company
- Appointed as coordinating and consulting counsel for eDiscovery issues for a major insurance company
- Developed a RIM program and corresponding records retention schedules for a global insurance company
- Reviewed and refined all aspects of discovery process for in-house legal department and formalized procedures in a Standard Operating Procedures document for a Fortune 500 company
- Served as national discovery counsel, managing the collection, review and production of documents in pharmaceutical litigation, including the training and management of 50 to 125 contract lawyers over a two-year period for a pharmaceutical company
- Served as national discovery counsel for a global pharmaceutical and medical devices company operating in 100 countries. Our representation includes preparing legal holds for matters involving employees in multiple countries, including Australia, Chile, China, France, Germany, India, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, UAE, the UK and US, as well as coordinating data collection from Denmark, Germany, Norway, the UK and US, and advising on data preservation and retention issues. We assist in data identification, counsel on issues related to data from legacy company systems, manage document review and production and prepare information technology 30(b)(6) witnesses.
- Advised on required records retention periods for one of the largest property and casualty insurers in the world (operating in 28 countries)
- Advised on records management laws and regulations in 16 jurisdictions for a publicly traded electronics solutions company
- Developed a global document retention policy and schedules for a global transportation and logistics company (operating in 140 countries)
- Prepared detailed document retention policies and overviews of relevant procedures and advising on retention of documents in hard and electronic copy for one of the largest private hospital groups in the UK
