Andrew Ledbetter is co-chair of the firm's Public Company and Corporate Governance practice. He regularly represents public companies in SEC periodic and current reporting, proxy statements and related corporate and disclosure advice. Andrew has advised in dozens of initial public offerings, stock exchange listings, secondary offerings, public and private M&A deals, international transactions, PIPEs, spinoffs, going private transactions and other transactions. He has also represented numerous private companies, VC funds and other investors, and placement agents in venture transactions, as well as private funds, investment advisers and broker dealers in organizational compliance and related matters.

Andrew also leverages his broad securities knowledge to advise clients on emerging financing trends, such as crowdfunding, Reg A+ and initial coin offerings (ICOs) and similar blockchain-enabled means for raising capital. Andrew has significant experience in the technology, life sciences, retail and financial services sectors.
