Alexandria Bingham's practice focuses on the defense of product liability, mass tort pharmaceutical and medical device litigation, consumer class action, and complex commercial disputes.

Alexandria has significant experience defending clients in product liability and consumer litigation in California state and federal courts, and in multidistrict litigation and coordinated proceedings throughout the country. She has successfully obtained dismissal of cases for clients, including manufacturers and distributors of various pharmaceutical products and medical devices. Her experience includes handling all aspects of litigation from pre-litigation investigation to trial preparation and resolution. Alexandria has significant experience with dispositive motion practice, in addition to briefing petitions for coordination and related matters before the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation.

In addition to her product liability experience, Alexandria has experience advising clients and defending claims related to emerging contaminants in connection with consumer goods.
