Claims made clauses: end of uncertainties?

15 May 2020

In line with recent judgments no. 9140/2016 and 22437/2018 rendered by its Joint Divisions, the Court of Cassation has once again stated the validity of the claim made insurance scheme, definitively concluding that so-called mixed clauses are valid as non-vexatious and worthy of legal protection.

Travel insurance policies and COVID-19 in Italy

16 April 2020

In Italy, a significant number of decrees and ordinances imposing travel restrictions have been issued by the government and regions: quarantine and home-stay measures for coronavirus-positive subjects or for those who have had contact with positive subjects, removal bans for people resident or domiciled in areas affected by the contagion, and more generally travel bans that are subject to limited exceptions.
