Robert Crewdson has a national and international practice focusing on the litigation and transactional needs of multi-national and national owners and contractors in the construction industry.

Robert handles significant disputes for owners and contractors across the country and around the world, including mediation, arbitration, and state and federal litigation matters. He has handled major disputes and litigation involving a wide variety of construction projects, including power plants, infrastructure projects, airport expansions, stadiums, mixed-use projects, healthcare facilities, office buildings, multifamily and projects and hotels. These matters have ranged from contractor terminations and extra work claims to delay claims and significant construction defect litigation.

He also advises clients with respect to the preparation of form contract documents, internal contracting and procurement policies, claims avoidance practices and in-house staff training.

Recognitions

Chambers USA has repeatedly recognized Robert for his construction work and has hailed him as "a true expert in construction contract law." Clients reported, "he is very professional with great efficiency, and is also great at watching our budget," as well as "very good at putting together the contract and making sure everything fits. [They] find his litigation background very helpful in assessing potential risks and deciding whether it's a risk [they] want to take." "With [Robert's] strong negotiating skills on the development side, he is especially well versed in issues affecting the retail development business, though he and his team offer an impressive breadth of knowledge across infrastructure issues. Market sources credit him with the success of the practice, mentioning its value for money, fast turnaround times and efficiency." "[R]ecognized for his high-level work, [sources have called Robert] 'a heavy hitter' in the field." The directory has noted his "diverse practice representing owners, developers and contractors." Robert has "an interesting and well-established construction practice that takes in both dispute resolution and the drafting of contracts."
