

Cross-Border Litigation

Globalization of the world's markets has brought ever-increasing opportunities for international commerce, the effect of which is to connect people, products and businesses throughout the world. With globalization, however, comes increased legal, regulatory, political, cultural, financial and reputational complexity and risk for international businesses.

Disputes arising in the context of international commerce tend to be equally complicated, often involving multiple proceedings advancing at the same time before courts of different jurisdictions. Effectively managing such disputes requires lawyers who possess a comprehensive knowledge of local law, procedure and market conditions, lawyers skilled at combining that knowledge with broad international experience, and lawyers with a truly global perspective and a thorough understanding of your business and its objectives. We call this Cross-Border Litigation.

As the largest litigation practice in the world, with over 1,800 lawyers in more than 30 countries spread across the Americas, Asia Pacific, Europe, the Middle East, Russia and the CIS, DLA Piper has more Cross-Border Litigation lawyers than any other firm. Our practice sits alongside our highly regarded International Arbitration group and leverages the firm's unrivalled teams of sector-focused lawyers to safeguard your business interests whenever, wherever and in whatever forum a dispute may arise.

In those jurisdictions where DLA Piper does not have an actual presence, the firm has well-established and trusted relationships with local firms who understand our approach to litigation, our commitment to quality and client service, and who share our international vision. In short, wherever your dispute arises and is to be resolved, DLA Piper has the experience and the sector-focused teams to secure the best outcome for your business.

Litigation funding - An innovative solution to costly construction disputes

21 September 2022

In summary, litigation funding can be an extremely helpful alternative source of financing for construction companies which either need financial assistance to pursue claims, or otherwise see the benefit both of offloading the downside risk of litigation and of using third party finance to fund outstanding claims, allowing them to use their own finance to invest in their core business. Given this, it is unsurprising that litigation funding plays an increasing role in the resolution of construction disputes. This is evidenced by the number of funders that are continuing to enter the market and provide innovative solutions to cost constrained companies. DLA Piper also launched an independent funding company (Aldersgate Funding Limited) to meet this need and offer clients access to GBP150 million for funding large-scale litigation and arbitration.

With that said, obtaining litigation funding for complex construction disputes (and particularly single cases) is, not a straightforward process. The funder has to have sufficient information to predict the outcome with a reasonable degree of certainty and to carry out a cost-benefit analysis, and this takes time and effort. It is key that claimants engage an experienced law firm which is able to navigate the funding process efficiently and negotiate the best terms for their clients. Often, experienced firms have strong relationships with funders, making every aspect of the process smoother.
