Andrew Davies advises public and private sector clients on long term strategic joint ventures, outsourcings and infrastructure projects, particularly with regards to project financing.

He has significant experience across a number of sectors including health, education and transport, with particular knowledge in the waste and energy sector as well as structuring innovative contractual solutions.

Within the waste and energy sector, Andrew has a broad range of clients in the private sector and funder community. Andrew advises large corporate clients on significant waste and energy projects, but also has experience in assisting innovative start-up businesses.

Providing advice over a number of years to the waste PPP sector has allowed Andrew to develop strong experience as a Project Finance energy lawyer, understanding the allocation of risks necessary to ensure a transaction is bankable, whilst also ensuring that sponsors only cede ground where required.
