Harry Rudo has a broad-based practice in complex commercial litigation dealing with general corporate litigation, energy and environmental law, and corporate governance and investigations. Harry has played a key role in representing universities, State governments, and corporations of all sizes, and conducting internal investigations of businesses and sports organizations.

Harry's practice involves representation of corporations and individuals operating in the technology, healthcare, hospitality, education, real estate, and sports and entertainment sectors. He has assisted in representing clients in litigation, arbitration, mediation, and government investigations, regarding business and contractual disputes, internal corporate investigations, and corporate compliance matters.

Harry is a member of the DLA Piper Baltimore Hiring Committee and the DLA Piper Baltimore Community Service Committee.

Harry has experience with a wide scope of matters including litigation, investigations, and corporate compliance. Representative matters include:

- Represented the Independent Commission investigating the culture of the University of Maryland football program after the tragic death of Linebacker Jordan McNair. This investigation resulted in the creation of a 192 page report following 165 interviews of players, coaches, and other individuals connected to the football program. The report is available here and is described here.
- Secured favorable settlement on behalf of Fortune 100 engineering company resolving litigation with subcontractor in federal district court. Dispute involved breach of contract allegations regarding manufacturing military equipment meeting detailed technical design specifications.
- Won a bench verdict in favor of New York University in an ERISA class action alleging that NYU mismanaged retirement plan offerings on behalf of its 20,000 participants and seeking over $350 million in damages. This case was the first of more than a dozen
