Thomas Kralik has extensive experience in business criminal law where he has represented and defended clients in numerous proceedings in recent years. His practice includes all aspects of criminal investigations from internal investigation, risk assessment of individual business fields to the defence of companies and individuals against criminal charges as well as general compliance advice.

Thomas completed his professional education with the well-known Austrian criminal lawyer Dr. Herbert Eichenseder. Shortly after he had started to work as self-employed lawyer, Thomas focused on white collar crime and defended clients successfully in several major white collar crime cases. Besides acting as defence lawyer in courts, he has been advising notable, also internationally active Austrian companies in compliance and white collar crime related matters.
