“But they’re not an Insured!” – NSW Supreme Court reaffirms third party beneficiary principles under the Insurance Contracts Act

25 November 2021

The NSW Supreme Court held that Brightcity International Pty Ltd, an importer of goods, was entitled to indemnity as a third party beneficiary under an Industrial Special Risks insurance policy issued by CGU Insurance to Admiral International Pty Ltd, a warehouse operator who stored Brightcity’s goods.

These proceedings arose after a fire at Admiral’s warehouse which damaged Brightcity’s goods. A number of claims were made. This article focuses on Brightcity’s claim for indemnity under Admiral’s ISR Policy as a third party beneficiary.

In arriving at its decision, the Court found that Brightcity fell within the “Interest of Other Parties’ clause in the ISR Policy. As such, section 48(1) of the Insurance Contract Act 1984 (Cth) allowed Brightcity to claim against CGU despite not being a contracting party to the Policy.

This follows the recent and related Full Federal Court decision of Insurance Australia Ltd t/as CGU Insurance v MOS Beverages Pty Ltd [2021] FCAFC 165 in which the Court, on Appeal, dealt with a similar claim by another customer of Admiral arising out of the same warehouse fire.

NB: this case note focuses on the Court’s consideration of third party beneficiary principles and does not discuss Brightcity’s claim for loss and damage against Admiral, or Admiral’s claim against CGU for indemnity under its own policy.

22 November 2021

In the eagerly anticipated judgment of Kabab-ji v Kout, the English Supreme Court upheld the Court of Appeal’s 2020 decision in the same matter that when English law is expressly chosen by the parties to govern a contract, English law will also usually govern the arbitration agreement contained in that contract.

Finality and freedom: unappreciated risks of the arbitral process

21 October 2021

In Australia, resolving disputes through arbitration is, and has been for some time now, an attractive option for commercial parties.

Just head to arbitration

14 October 2021

The interaction between domestic laws, choice-of-law and arbitration clauses in contracts governing cross-border transactions can create uncertainty for commercial parties when disputes arise. The case of Freedom Foods Pty Ltd v Blue Diamond Growers [2021] FCA 172 is a recent reminder of this.

Privilege - you can't have your cake and eat it too

14 October 2021

It is crucial for inhouse lawyers and legal advisers to understand the extent to which legal professional privilege applies when conducting investigations. A recent Australian Federal Court case has handed down an important reminder on privilege – finding that, while notes of interviews and outlines of evidence created during internal investigations were protected by privilege at the time they were created, conduct following that was inconsistent with maintenance of confidentiality waived privilege, even when done with the best of intentions.

SEACHange Issue I: October 2021

14 October 2021

SEACHANGE

Our first issue covers a wide range of jurisdictions, and an even wider range of issues.

We'll cover a new view from the SICC on admitting evidence of corruption in arbitral proceedings, Lord Mance's analysis (with potentially far-reaching consequences) on what, in the age of COVID-19, constitutes a "competent local authority", the Australian Federal Court's thinking on the limits of privilege in relation to internal investigations and an important decision of the Indian Supreme Court on the interplay between court and tribunal issued interim relief.

The UK Government is not a "competent local authority"

14 October 2021

In his arbitration award issued on 10 September 2021, Lord Mance departed from the views adopted in the UK FCA test case in considering whether advices and orders to close businesses as a precaution against COVID-19 had in fact been issued by a recognized authority under the terms of the Policy.

You Can Run But You Cannot Hide: The Public Duty to Consider Evidence of Corruption in Arbitrations

14 October 2021

The Singapore International Commercial Court recently held that parties cannot, as between themselves, agree to exclude evidence of corruption from the scope of an arbitration. This is a notable departure from the usual practice of allowing parties a wide berth to decide what evidence is admissible in an arbitration. Future parties should take note that arbitrators and supervisory courts will not look favorably upon attempts to ignore corrupt behavior.

Indian Supreme Court clarifies the interplay between court-ordered and tribunal-ordered interim measures

1 October 2021

The Supreme Court of India in Arcelor Mittal Nippon Steel India Ltd. v. Essar Bulk Terminal Limited clarified the scope of the court's power to grant interim relief when the tribunal has been constituted during the pendency of the interim relief applications before the court. The Supreme Court held that the bar on the Court to entertain interim relief applications would not operate, if the process of consideration of the interim relief applications by the Court has commenced, and/or whether the Court has applied its mind to some extent before the constitution of the tribunal.

Pleading with care: the limits of a tribunal's jurisdiction

31 August 2021

A recent Singapore High Court decision in CIZ v CJA is a useful reminder that the primary instruments for demarcating matters in dispute in an arbitration are the parties' own written submissions. Tribunals must decide cases that parties put before them, not cases that parties could (or should) have made.

Insights from the US: will knowledge, recklessness or negligence in Australian securities class actions actually change anything?

16 August 2021

Last week the Federal Government introduced permanent reforms to the continuous disclosure regime and misleading and deceptive conduct provisions in the Corporations Act 2001 and ASIC Act 2001 which provide that companies and their officers will not be exposed to civil liability unless they had a requisite mental element, being knowledge, recklessness or negligence. This change is in line with the recommendations of the Parliamentary Joint Committee for Corporations and Financial Services and also extends the temporary measures originally introduced at the height of the COVID-19 pandemic.

This change brings Australia's continuous disclosure regime closer to that of its counterparts in the United States and the United Kingdom, and there is much we can learn from our international colleagues.

In its groundbreaking judgment, the Supreme Court also found that interim relief under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 (Arbitration Act) would be available for foreign seated arbitrations between two Indian parties, notably setting aside a contrary view held by the Gujarat High Court. Indian parties and foreign investors with Indian registered companies now have the freedom to choose a suitable seat outside of India to resolve their commercial disputes through arbitration.
