Catherine is a regulatory lawyer. She is known for her "incredible ability to combine business acumen and exceptional legal knowledge," in the words of one client. Catherine advises some of the world's leading global airlines in all aspects of regulatory compliance, including passenger rights, all-inclusive price advertising regulations, airline operational and safety compliance, air cargo claims and international air law matters. Catherine also advises clients in the emergent unmanned aviation systems (UAS) and RPAS sectors.

Catherine also represents international transport and third party logistics companies and Fortune 500 manufacturers, producers and retailers in relation to their supply chain and distribution law matters, including compliance with trade, import and export controls.

She also has experience advising foreign companies that are the subject of multinational conspiracy and bid-rigging investigations in seeking immunity and in their dealings with the Criminal Branch of the Competition Bureau and the Public prosecution Service of Canada.

Catherine is a much sought after speaker. She was invited to speak at the Third Chinese Enterprises Outbound Investment Conference in Beijing, sponsored by the CCPIT and the Canada China Business Council.
