Sergio Rojas has represented national and international companies in contractual and non-contractual liability disputes, both in the ordinary jurisdiction as well as in contentious-administrative, arbitration and international courts.

He advises on cross-border, strategic litigation in Colombia in matters of commercial intermediation, insurance, large infrastructure claims, compliance and financial risks.

As part of his crisis management practice, Sergio has advised clients in matters of special media or patrimonial exposure, leading interdisciplinary teams to mitigate the consequences of a crisis from its early stage.

Before joining DLA Piper Martínez Beltrán, Sergio worked as an associate at two major Colombian law firms. He additionally served as an advisor to the President of the International Association of Insurance Law (AIDA).

Outside of his practice, Sergio works as a university professor, has published several books related to tort law in Colombia and Spain, and served on the drafting committee of a bill related to personal injury compensation.
